MEMORANDUM FOR: Mr. Wayne Smith
Director for Program Analysis
National Security Council

SUBJECT : Country Programming

1. NSDM-112 has been reviewed to determine how best we may contribute to the development of country programs in line with the President's Directive.

2. In this connection, I note that there are two major aspects to the intelligence community's contribution to each program developed. The first of these is the substantive intelligence input related to political stability, economic viability, security, military capability, the possible impact of various U.S. programs, and other matters of a related nature. The second involves the sensitive annex which will concern the intelligence programs and facilities and activities within the country of concern.

3. To respond most effectively to these two requirements, the following procedure will be followed:

a. The DDI representative to the CPM Working Group will be the channel for the substantive intelligence contribution to that group.

b. The Critical Collection Problems Committee (CCPC), working under the aegis of the NIRB, has been charged with the development of the Intelligence Annexes. This procedure, as you know, is the established one for the development of Intelligence Annexes to NSSM studies.

4. In order that the contribution in both instances may be responsive to the programs to be developed, it would be most helpful if the general outline for the studies and any specific guidance on the nature of the information to be developed could be made available as soon as they are drafted.
